By that, I mean that my Postman always gets to the end of my letter before I do. Every day, she brings it to my work (our office is on a university campus) and I get to it before I get to mine. So, on Valentine's Day, I didn't have to do anything special. I just got to enjoy being in love with a puppy. I figured that if she wanted to post a Valentine's Day greeting, she would figure out a way. She sure did. My puppy, DJ, named her a special Valentine's Day gift: she posted a picture of my coat and a message that read: "I love your lovely coat. I thank you for the privilege of belonging to you." Maybe I did something wrong with the Postman. Maybe I should have let her take the letter to the post office.

May be she should have stopped at my door first. She could do that; it's not like I'd miss it. Or maybe the Postman was just meant to do what she did. I just don't know. And I don't think I really care. My love for the Postman will always be the most important thing in my life. But every now and then, I like to think about 82157476af
